Why your engagement survey leaves you without a clear direction

“We’re worried about results from our engagement survey but aren’t sure where to go with them.”

So what’s the surprise? You’ve measured how people feel about work but what do you actually do when employees report that they’re not fully engaged with the organisation that employees them?

Are you measuring the right things? Evidence and experience show that there are workplace practices which lead to engagement, and which are also highly associated with performance, health and well-being.

And they can be measured in ways that identify clear and direct opportunities for improvement and transformation.
